POLITICAL SCIENCE IN WESTERN EUROPE

A Trend Report

JAN BARENTS

Political science must be described as the study of political man. It is certain that the applied understanding of politics can help man cope to some with his society and one society with another. That study by the late Professor J. Barents must be of interest, therefore, because it reports on the current state of political knowledge, research and teaching in Western Europe, as revealed in journals and latest published works.

The study covers the period from the Second World War. It reveals, for instance, that much research has been undertaken in relatively new fields; political parties, pressure groups, and the formation of political opinion. The reader is referred from the text to the bibliography for the relevant publications.

The report was commissioned by the International Political Science Association in connection with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization's comparative work Political Science in the United States of America: A Trend Report by Professor Dwight Waldo.
